Celebrating the infinite possibilities of neurodiversity - Neurodiversity Week 13-19 March 2023

What does Sir Isaac Newton, Andy Warhol, Nikola Tesla, William Yeats, Greta Thunberg and Billie Eilish all have in common?

They have all mastered their neurodivergent talents!

Around one in five people are neurodiverse.

Neurodiversity knows no geographic nor language bound. Like a person's fingerprints, no two brains — not even those of identical twins — are exactly the same. Because of that, there's no definition of "normal" capabilities for the human brain. Understanding the types of neurodiversity creates awareness and an environment where all of us can thrive together. Embracing our individual strengths is the key to unlocking our full potential.

Universities : How to Choose ?

The search for your children's future university is not always easy, neither for you or for them, especially when you don't know which course to take, which university or even which country!

Open days are there to help you decide in which university and what course of study is best for your children. If some universities don't have open days available, check out the websites of the universities you are interested in to get more information. We have compiled all the information we had access to on the APEEE website.

We do hope this helps you, if you see some information missing or if you have additional information you think should appear, do let us know.
